Family-Owned Since 1972

The year was 1972. Nixon was President. The war in Vietnam was drawing to its messy close, and "American Pie" was at the top of the charts. Corporate dropout Ken Gjemre and fellow bibliophile Pat Anderson opened a used book shop in an abandoned laundromat on Lovers Lane in Dallas, Texas. They ran ads in the local paper declaring "We Buy Books" and began buying from the public. Upon the shop's opening, they had a few thousand books and hordes of customers. "You could stir them with a stick," Ken said. Based on the simple desire to "waste not and read a lot," they had established what would later become America's largest, family-owned new and used book retailer – Half Price Books.

Today, we have more than 100 stores in 16 states. Our stores are packed with hardbacks, paperbacks, magazines, records, CDs, laser-discs, DVDs and Blu-rays. And let's not forget games of every sort and platform – from classic board games to Nintendo and Xbox. Our founders coined the phrase, "We buy and sell everything ever printed or recorded (except yesterday's newspaper)." They weren't only talking about our extensive selection, but more so that we wouldn't censor the products. Ken said, "We don't let others, or ourselves, determine what our customers should read." Our selection to this day remains hugely inclusive, unsnobbish. We'll shelve and sell just about anything – from The Diary of Anne Frank to The History of Farting. We might chuckle at the titles, but we won't censor them.

We can't stand waste. Almost everything is valuable to somebody. Many a reader has gleefully spent an afternoon in a cozy corner at Half Price Books, finding secondhand bargains with inspiring inscriptions and dog-eared pages from the previous owner. However, often the ocean of books that we buy from the public is more volume than we can hold. As Ken said, "If we can't sell it, we'll give it away." So, we strive to recycle and donate our overstock to nonprofit groups in the neighborhood as well as organizations on nearly every continent on the globe. We guide our philanthropy with a simple motto: Do what you can, when you can, where you are.

Meet one of our booksellers and they'll likely tell you they're also a musician, filmmaker, writer or designer. If you detest waste and cherish the written word, perhaps you, too, belong on our team. Visit hpb.com/jobs to learn more about joining the Half Price Books family.

Each day that we go to work, we hope to do two things: share our favorite things with our friends and help make the world a little better. Together we carry on the mission and causes of our founders – be fair to our employees and customers, support literacy, be kind to the environment, advocate First Amendment rights, and remain financially viable so that we may continue. Our President and CEO Sharon said, "My mom made a commitment to do the right thing and it's my job to uphold it."

"Success to us is having jobs for all these people," said Sharon. The employee-centric culture of Half Price Books began at inception with the notion of sharing profits with the staff. Our founders believed in addressing the "human quota, rather than just dollars and cents."

There's no real science to it. Over the years we've opened stores where our people wanted to go. Our expansion plan is modest. We're patient. We don't borrow. But we're growing and opening new stores and entering new markets. We plan to be around for a long time to continue to provide interesting and inviting stores for our employees and customers to spend their days. And we will proudly continue to be your largest, most diverse source for books on paper.
